1st International Conference “Language, Literature and Education”

Department of Preschool Education, Faculty of Education, University of Crete

It is a great pleasure to announce the 1st International Conference “Language, Literature & Education” which will be organized and hosted by the Department of Preschool Education of the University of Crete, Faculty of Education, University of Crete.

In the context of this first conference emphasis will be put on aspects stemming from the interrelation between language and literature. Despite the fact that literature is intrinsically connected with language, since words represent “its material”, “as stone or bronze is of sculpture, paints of pictures, or sounds of music¹, their relation is often overlooked as self-evident. Especially in the horizon of expectations of the 21st century with the rise of Artificial Intelligence (AI), the emergence of new codes of communication, the increase of intercultural contacts, the rejection of social and gender stereotypes, revisiting the language “idiom” of literary discourse appears not only useful but also imperative.

In this light, the conference aims at the exploration of aspects such as the use of dialects in literature, language in the context of different literary genres, language in children’s books, the literary style of specific authors / poets, language as a vehicle of ideology in literature, the dialogue between literary language and other communicational codes used within other arts, the representation of children’s idiolect in literary texts, language and gender identity etc. In addition, topics of language and literature teaching in both primary or secondary education are of great interest for us, since along with the intersection of language and literature, techniques,
